

INDEPENDENT CONTRACTOR ROLE

Clinical Analyst

Works a case through The Lexcura Clinical Intelligence Model™ and builds the evidence the report is written from.

Type: Independent contractor Location: Remote, United States Schedule: You choose which case offers to accept

About the role

Clinical Analysts are where each case begins. Working in the secure contractor portal on the Lexcura website, you take a set of medical records through our seven-step method, confirm what happened and when, and identify where the record is complete, where it isn't, and where the care raises questions an expert should look at.

What you'll do

- Work assigned cases in the secure contractor portal, step by step, following the seven pillars: Record Integrity, Baseline, Imaging Analysis, Timeline Reconstruction, Standard of Care, Regulatory and Compliance Overlay, and Causation Mapping
- Confirm the case timeline in true date and time order, from the first relevant event through the outcome
- Identify missing records, late entries, documentation gaps and conflicts between documents
- Flag questions about care, escalation and timing for clinical review
- Cite the exact page for every fact, and confirm the page shows it
- Complete each case by the deadline shown in the offer

What this role is not: Summarizing charts, giving opinions on negligence, rewriting reports, or contacting anyone involved in a case.

This is not chart review

You analyze, not summarize. Every case follows The Lexcura Clinical Intelligence Model™, seven steps that show what the record proves, where it falls short, and what happened, when.

Every finding must be exact. Each fact must match the page it comes from. You open the cited page and check the time, value or wording before it's accepted.

The work is used in legal decisions. Attorneys and healthcare leaders rely on our reports to decide whether to take a case, how to defend one, or what to fix. Accuracy matters more than speed.

You stay neutral. We report what the records show, for and against. We don't advocate for either side.

No legal opinions or testimony. Your work supports a screening report. It is not expert testimony and never states that care was negligent.

Requirements for this role

- Active, unrestricted license at RN level or above

- At least 3 years of hands-on clinical experience
- Strong attention to detail and comfort working in a structured, step-by-step system
- Legal nurse or record review experience is helpful but not required; we train every contractor on our method

Required of every contractor

- Active, unrestricted license in good standing (verified before onboarding)
- Living and working in the United States
- A private, secure workspace and a computer with a current operating system and up-to-date security software
- Signed independent contractor, confidentiality and business associate agreements before your first case
- Completion of Lexcura onboarding and confidentiality training
- Disclosure of current and recent employers and facilities, so you're never assigned a case involving them

How case offers work

- Case offers are sent through the Lexcura scheduling app to every qualified contractor for the role and specialty.
- The first qualified contractor to accept is assigned the case. Offers that are taken close automatically.
- Once you accept, you must start work within 2 hours, on the same day.
- Each offer shows its completion deadline before you accept. Only accept work you can start and finish on time.

Working with us

You'll work as an independent contractor, not an employee, entirely inside the secure contractor portal on the Lexcura website. The Lexcura app is used only for case offers and scheduling. Records are never downloaded, printed, emailed or saved to personal devices. Pay is per completed task, and rates are shared during onboarding. There is no guaranteed number of cases.

How to apply: complete the application at lexcurasummit.com/join-our-team. We review every application personally and will contact you about license verification and onboarding if your experience matches a role we're filling.
